

Counter Terrorism DHS Whistle blower on Obama Admin Phil Haney Found Shot to Death

By Pamela Geller - on Latest News

I received word late last night from a friend who had worked in the FBI that Phil Haney had been shot dead. Details are sketchy and there has been no news coverage of his death. None. Our thoughts and prayer are with his family. Phil Haney was a patriot and a hero. His courage was singular.

Haney stood up to the Obama administration and shook the DHS to its foundation. He was a kind and gentle man. I deeply respected him.

This is devastating.

An agent of the Department of Homeland Security, or DHS, for 15 years, Philip Haney, reported that after the Christmas Day underwear bomber, Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab, tried to blow up a crowded passenger jet over Detroit, “President Obama threw the intelligence community under the bus for its failure to ‘connect the dots.’ He said, ‘This was not a failure to collect intelligence; it was a failure to integrate and understand the intelligence that we already had.’”

Haney revealed: “Most Americans were unaware of the enormous damage to morale at the Department of Homeland Security, where I worked, his condemnation caused. His words infuriated many of us because we knew his administration had been engaged in a bureaucratic effort to destroy the raw material – the actual intelligence we had collected for years, and erase those dots. The dots constitute the intelligence needed to keep Americans safe, and the Obama administration was ordering they be wiped away.”

What Haney discloses is truly shocking: “Just before that Christmas Day attack, in early November 2009, I was ordered by my superiors at the Department of Homeland Security to delete or modify several hundred records of individuals tied to designated Islamist terror groups like Hamas from the important federal database, the Treasury Enforcement Communications System (TECS). These types of records are the basis for any ability to ‘connect dots.’ Every day, DHS Customs and Border Protection officers watch entering and exiting many individuals associated with known terrorist affiliations, then look for patterns. Enforcing a political scrubbing of records of Muslims greatly affected our ability to do that. Even worse, going forward, my colleagues and I were prohibited from entering pertinent information into the database.”

Haney described how he began investigating scores of individuals with links to the traditionalist Islamic Indo-Pakistani Deobandi movement, and its related offshoots, prominently, Tablighi Jamaat. Read more about that here.

Related: Philip Haney: Obama officials should have had their clearances revoked a long time ago
“Administration nixed probe into Southern California jihadists,” By Phil Haney

Sources: DHS whistleblower on Obama administration, terrorism in America found dead

Law Enforcement Today, February 21, 2020:

SAN FRANCISCO, CA- We've received reports that Philip Haney, a DHS whistleblower on the Obama administration, has been found dead.

We have not yet received independent confirmation from the Sheriff's Department, but sources within law enforcement have verified that there's a death investigation underway.

If you have seen a few episodes of Behind the Uniform or have ever watched Fox News, you probably recognize the name Philip Haney. He was the DHS whistleblower that dropped the hammer on the Obama administration regarding the Muslim Brotherhood and ISIS.

He was also a friend to many at Law Enforcement Today. We have an exclusive interview with him at the bottom of the article that was conducted on Behind the Uniforms before his death.

Multiple sources tell us that Philip's body was discovered outside San Francisco, CA, last night. The current indications point to him being shot to death.

LET Unity – It's being called the "Netflix" of the Emergency Responder and Veteran Community

It is unclear when it happened or how. The details are still emerging. As soon as we have more information, we will provide an update.

Friends of Haney told us that they spoke with Haney earlier this week and he'd "never been happier". They've suggested there's absolutely no way he would have taken his own life... and reinforce that he's had many enemies since he blew the whistle on the Obama administration.

Close friends of Haney tell us that his wife lost her battle with cancer in 2019. Haney was engaged to be married later this year. The author of See Something, Say Nothing was preparing to go back on the road in advance of the upcoming election. He was currently living in California, just outside of San Francisco.

In 2018, Haney told Intercessors for America prayer activists that he had been working on a "special assignment" in Minnesota to stop Rep. Keith Ellison from being elected Minnesota's Attorney General. As we approach the 2020 elections, friends of Haney's told us he was planning on doubling down on efforts to "protect America from progressive leftists socialists".

Haney was a guest on IFA's now-weekly pre-election prayer call, where when asked by IFA's Dave Kubal what's at stake in the 2018 midterm elections, Haney said:

"What's at stake is our sovereignty, the right to choose the form of government we would live under."

He continued:

"This is a moment that's generational," said Haney, "and now is the time for us to stand up and take our place in representation of government as ordained by God and to reaffirm the values that our country was founded on, and choose life, not death.”

According to Haney, the Constitution is threatened by “progressive leftist socialists” and by the Islamic movement. He said their goal is to impose Sharia law:

And that’s where Keith Ellison comes in. He’s actually a hybrid between both. He represents and is supported both by antifa, MoveOn.org, the Democratic national party’s position on abortion, open borders, sanctuary cities, every platform of the left, whereas on the other side he’s also affiliated with the Muslim Brotherhood, which is the global Islamic movement that seeks to establish Sharia law.

Haney, who is credited with helping capture more than 300 jihadists, is best known for blowing the whistle on the Obama administration for shutting down an investigation he was leading that could have potentially stopped, among others, delete and scrub records the terrorist attack in San Bernardino.

That attack, occurring on December 2, 2015, left 14 people dead and 22 seriously injured from gunshot wounds at the Inland Regional Center in San Bernardino.

The perpetrators, Syed Rizwan Farook and Tashfeen Malik, a married couple living in the city of Redlands, targeted a San Bernardino County Department of Public Health training event and holiday party, of about 80 employees, in a rented banquet room.

Farook was an American-born U.S. citizen of Pakistani descent, who worked as a health department employee. Malik was a Pakistani-born lawful permanent resident of the United States.

After the shooting, the couple fled in a rented sport utility vehicle (SUV). Four hours later, police pursued their vehicle and killed them in a shootout. On December 3, 2015, the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) opened a counter-terrorism investigation. On December 6, 2015, in a prime-time address delivered from the Oval Office, President Barack Obama defined the shooting as an act of terrorism.

Backing up 6 years, Haney was being ordered to scrub and delete records. His Senate testimony can be seen here.

According to information he provided under the Whistle Blower’s Act, Haney said:

“It is very plausible that one or more of the subsequent terror attacks on the homeland could have been prevented if more subject matter experts in the Department of Homeland Security had been allowed to do our jobs back in late 2009.

It is demoralizing—and infuriating—that today, those elusive dots are even harder to find, and harder to connect, than they were during the winter of 2009.”

<https://youtu.be/Ea6pt13Jp5Q>

